

CALIBURGER SPIN OUT CLOSES SERIES A FINANCING

Nth Games To Do Commercial Theater Launch In West Los Angeles On January 13, 2015

Santa Monica, CA – January 8, 2015 – CaliBurger™ announced today that Nth Games, spun out of CaliBurger earlier this year, has closed a Series A financing. The capital will be used to strengthen the management team and commercially launch “theater mode” group gaming. The first ticketed theater gaming event will be held at iPic Theater in Westwood on January 13, 2015 and will be based on the popular multi-player game Minecraft. Individuals will come together and experience Minecraft in a new way in the theater by having two screens to visualize the game; players will see the first person view of the game on the device they bring to the theater while the big screen will show different, strategic third person perspectives of the game. Tickets can be purchased online at: <https://www.ipictheaters.com/showtimes-and-tickets.aspx?cinemaid=0503&date=20150113>.

"CaliBurger initially developed the interactive gaming platform for the Video Walls in its restaurants to create a virtual equivalent of the McDonald's playground," said Silas Adler, CEO of CaliBurger. "Nth Games is now taking the platform to theaters seeking to find new ways to generate uses of their auditoriums in light of declining ticket sales for movies."

David Steigelfest, President of Nth Games, stated, "With this capital infusion, we can begin a nationwide roll out of theater mode gaming and set up the social network for gamers to compete locally, nationally, and globally in theater mode gaming. We expect our technology will result in most major popular gaming titles being released in a 'theater mode.'"

While Nth Games deploys the technology in theater chains, CaliBurger will continue to implement the technology in its global restaurants. CaliBurger is the largest shareholder in Nth Games.
